78TH OVERSEAS BATTALION

(WINNIPEG GRENADIERS)

PREFACE

IN writing this short preface to the Book of the 78th Overseas Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, it is not the intention to obtrude anything on the work of the artist but simply to state a few brief facts in connection with the organization of the battalion.

The idea of a unit proceeding overseas had been, ever since the outbreak of the war, the hope of every militia unit in Canada, and when the word came on July 1st, 1915, to Col. J. B. Mitchell, of the 100th Winnipeg Grenadiers, authorizing him to raise a unit from this battalion, it was received with the wildest enthusiasm. A whirlwind campaign was organized under the officers of this unit and by August 4th, 1915, the battalion was ready to proceed to Sewell, having its full complement of men, within the short space of a month.

Major Jas. Kirkcaldy, of the 8th Battalion (Winnipeg Rifles), had at this time just returned from the front on sick leave, having been wounded at St. Julien during the now famous battle in which the Canadians figured so prominently. While assisting the Minister of Militia at Ottawa in his round of inspection, he received an offer from Col. Mitchell to head the unit being raised by the Winnipeg Grenadiers. Later, at Winnipeg, this offer was finally accepted, and Col. Kirkcaldy took charge of the battalion shortly after its movement to Sewell camp.

At the same time the position of second in command was filled by Major J. N. Semmens, who originally belonged to the Winnipeg Grenadiers, and was, at the time, a company major in the 45th Battalion. Later, Capt. G. R. Heron, who commanded "B" company, was promoted to the position of Junior Major, and Lieut. E. G. Berry became Adjutant, with the rank of Captain.

During the battalion's stay at Sewell camp it was admitted by the officers of the headquarter staff that the 78th Battalion was unique, not only in its system of training but in the rapidity with which the men adapted themselves to instructions. From the time that the long line of mufti trekked into the battalion camping ground until the snow was on the ground and they finally left the camp, no time was wasted to bring the officers and men to the standard of efficiency obtained by other units in camp. The end of the season found the men developed wonderfully in a physical sense; they had become masters of their drill; they were second to none in ability to build trenches, and on manoeuvres they had proved to be masters of the most efficient battalions in camp. All of this was due to the able guidance and efficiency of the Commanding Officer and his staff, coupled with the ability of his men.

On October 28th the battalion entrained for winter quarters and are now stationed at the old Agricultural College, which has proved to be one of the best barracks in the city of Winnipeg. Here the battalion has set itself to specialize in four great features of up-to-date warfare: physical training and bayonet fighting, musketry instruction, bombing and machine gun work, training as many men as possible in these various branches, so that when the time comes and they meet their foemen they may be worthy of the traditions of the comrades that preceded them and of the Grenadiers.

MAJOR J. N. SEMMENS
Second in Command

MAJOR G. R. HERON
Junior Major
